New Marriage License Law Has Decreased the Revenue of Ministers and Town Clerks—Representative of Lehigh Valley Silk Company Looking for Location for Branch Mill—Chicago Glee Club Pleases Large Audience—Tigers Install Officers.

The law enacted at the last session of the Rhode Island general assembly, regulating the issue of marriage licenses, which requires residents from without the state to file application five days before license can be issued, has had its effect in Westerly, which had become a sort of Green Green by reason of its location just over the Connecticut boundary line, easy of access by rail and by trolley.

Not only has the law tended to decrease the fees of the town clerk, but has also lessened the income of the local ministers. The law has probably not prevented this hasty class of marriages but has instead caused more expense to Connecticut couples who, instead of being married in Rhode Island, keep right on to Massachusetts, where the ceremony is performed, as license is granted upon application, just as was the case in Rhode Island before the enactment of the present law.

Terrible Suffering

Ecema All Over Baby's Body.
"When my baby was four months old his face broke out with ecema, and at sixteen months of age, his hands and arms were in a dreadful state. The ecema spread all over his body. We had to put a mask or cloth over his face and tie up his hands. Finally we gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few months he was entirely cured. Today he is a healthy boy." Mrs. I. Lewis, Haring, Maine.
Hood's Sarsaparilla cures blood diseases and builds up the system.

Anne Brewster Fanning Chapter Hears Interesting Paper—Card Ledger System for Savings Bank—Death of Silas Bromley.

The regular meeting of Anne Brewster Fanning chapter, D. A. R., was held at the home of Mrs. G. H. Jennings, Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Jennings being assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Carl Jennings. The regent, Miss Martha Brewster, presided at the meeting. Mrs. H. Brown, Mrs. John H. Tracy and Mrs. F. C. Whiting were appointed alternates to the National congress, the regent being the delegate. It was voted to have a Washington birthday whist and dance, as in previous years.

Interesting Paper.

The paper for this meeting was by Miss Martha Brewster, its subject being Grandmother's Housekeeping and Mine.

Grandmother's home was usually a large house, very seldom less than ten rooms, usually scantily furnished, unless grandfather was the oldest son or endowed with a large portion of the world's goods. If the master of the house was a cabinet maker, so much the better, for a large share of the furniture was usually home-made. The house was built around a large chimney, ten or twelve feet square, with a fireplace opening into each room. The largest fireplace was in the kitchen, and would take a log five feet or more in length. There was a chair or so, a settle, spinning wheel, loom, and a board laid on two horses for a table. Some shelves in a corner held all the dishes, and some pewter, probably brought from England.

Perhaps grandmother's most prized article of furniture was the loom, for with this she practically dressed the family. She wove into cloth the wool from their own sheep and colored it with home-made dyes. Flax was grown and treated by grandmother in much the same way, and woven into cloth, sheets, pillow cases and table linen.

Preparing the Meals.

Besides all this, there were the meals for the large families. They had no stove, but a crane hanging on the fire held pots to boil or stew the roots or potatoes, and corn cakes were baked in the coals. Meat was sometimes roasted on a spit, something like two tall andirons with serrated sides, on which iron rods holding the meat or fowl could rest and be turned to roast equally. The roast or fowl would probably have to be prepared by grandmother herself, the roast cut from the carcass and the fowl killed and plucked. The meat for the cakes would doubtless have been through the pease under her hands. Besides getting one day's meals, she cured and dried meats and fruits in their season, together with herbs, which she used to cure the family ills. In leisure moments she knitted, made rugs and did the finest embroidery.

Not College Bred.

Grandmother was not highly educated—there was no need of that as long as she was a housekeeper.

Then and Now.

Then the contrast was shown between the housekeeping in olden times and this—a house of five or six small rooms, all on one floor. If this house or home is situated at the top of a tall building, an elevator conveys the housekeeper to her home. The furnishings of the kitchen differ somewhat from grandmother's. First, there is no fire or stove, perhaps a gas or electric range. The meat comes all prepared to cook, and the flour also. When the dishes are washed, there are hot and cold water faucets. The dishes are of china, mostly imported, and while there may be a few pieces of pewter on the sideboard or plate-rail, they are prized as ornaments. In case of lack of time, a meal can be ordered from a hotel or restaurant, on the telephone, and one can visit with one's friends by the same means, which would have been considered witchcraft in grandmother's time.

The furnishing of modern rooms was described, and the various ways of hearing music, sermons or the latest comic opera, as by the phonograph and other like instruments.

Cleaning nowadays is done by a vacuum cleaner, and clothing prepared by people employed for that purpose.

The Modern Housewife.

The housekeeper of today breakfasts in bed on tropical fruits, some crackers and a cup of coffee. Then dresses, goes shopping, takes a light lunch, attends a club meeting, where she reads an address on The Way to Train Children, having had some experience as several of her friends have pet dogs. Goes to a bridge party, home to dinner and then to a ball or opera. All this traveling is not done in the days of grandmother, by horseback or stage coach. A motor car is not a luxury, but a necessity. Grandmother's house was lighted by the ingenuity and the dexterity of her fingers. The modern house is lighted by the magic art called electricity.

A Social Hour.

The two hostesses served refreshments after the reading of this interesting paper.

CARD LEDGER SYSTEM

Installed in Jewett City Savings Bank.

Keeping in line with the up to date banking methods being adopted by many concerns in New England, Treasurer F. E. Robinson of the Jewett City Savings bank has installed the card ledger system. The advantages of this scheme are many, and it carries the depositors and loan accounts in the most expeditious method. Each account is kept on a card in a sliding rack furnished with a simplified index system, thus making every account available instantly. With the old book system, there were many heavy ledgers, the earlier ones of which carried but a few active accounts among the hundreds of closed ones, thus requiring much carrying of the heavy books outside desk together with the unnecessary handling of the dead account pages. At night the racks are removed and the books are put in the vault. Together with the system is the new double oak desk which contains it.
